The beachside Summer X Salt Markets return to Clarko Reserve in Trigg for another season, kicking off this Saturday.

The markets bring together artists and designers, food and drink trucks, live music, kids nature play and craft activities, wellness sessions and coastal clean-ups.

Since beginning in 2016, the Summer X Salt Markets have specialised in giving creatives a platform to grow their business and encourage positive and sustainable practices to benefit the planet.

The event has also promoted the zero-waste movement, including having a mug library where mugs and utensils are available for the public to borrow and beach clean-ups. This year it has also partnered with Carbon Positive to offset its emissions.

This season's wellness offerings will include yoga classes, meditation, sound healing, Pilates and pop-up ice baths, while emerging artists aged between 12 and 25 will perform acoustic music in hourly sets.

There will be 12 sets of markets running through to March 19 from 9am-1pm, as well as free meditation at 7am, yoga at 8am, Pilates at 9am and kids nature play activities and coastal clean-ups from 9-11am.
